How To Freeze and Can Corn

When preparing corn to can or freeze, select ears that are fresh and have good green color in the husks. The corn should be free of decay and worm injury. Ears should be well covered with plump, tender kernels.

Avoid picking ears with undeveloped kernels which lack yellow color in yellow corn or good white color in white corn varieties.

For freezing it is abolutely necessary for any food you freeze to be of top quality. Freezing only preserves the quality; it does not improve it. Foods is less than pure condition deteriorate more noticeably when frozen, so do not bring corn in from the garden that is not the best quality to freeze or can.

Corn is one of those vegetables which is at its best when it is freshly harvested. It should go straight from the garden into the process of being frozen or canned. Remove husks and silks and wash the corn as quickly as possible. For freezing corn, follow the following instructions:

Whole Kernel or Cream Style - Heat ears or blanch in boiling water for four minutes. Cool quickly in ice cold water and drain. For whole kernel corn, cut the kernels from the cob at about ⅔ the depth of the kernel. For cream style corn, cut at about the center of the kernels, then scrape the cob to remove the juice and heart of the kernel. Pack corn in containers, leaving ½" head space. Seal, freeze and store at 0 degrees F. or below.

On the Cob - Sort ears according to size after preparing them for freezing. Heat in boiling water or blanch as follow: Small ears - 7 minutes; Medium ears - 9 minutes; Large ears - 11 minutes.

The heating time is longer for corn to be frozen on the cob because the heat must penetrate through the cob as well as the kernels in order for the entire ear to be properly blanched. The reason for blanching is to stop the enzymatic action wich will continue to cause the sugar in the corn to turn to starch. After blanching the ears, cool and place the corn into ice cold water, drain, package, seal and store at 0 degrees F. or below. (Hint: If you want to have a good supply of ice to use for freezing corn, take plastic freezer containers and put water into your freezer if space allow. This way you can freeze ice in blocks which will last much longer than cubes.)

When canning corn, you may even use the cream style method or the whole kernel method. The following are directions for each.

Cream Style - Cut corn from the cob at about the center of the kernel; then scrape the cob to remove the juice and heart of the kernel. Add two cups of boiling water for each four cups of corn and bring to a boil.

Pack hot corn to within 1" of the top of the jar. Use pint jars only for cream style. Add ½ teaspoon salt to each jar. Remove air bubbles by running a spatula or knife between food and jars. Adjust jar lids. Process in a pressure canner at 10 pounds of pressure at 240 degrees F. Pint jars should be processed for 85 minutes.

Whole Kernel - To prepare whole kernel corn for canning, cut the corn from the cob at about ⅔ the depth of the kernel. Do not scrape the cob. Add two cups boiling water for each four cups of corn and bring to a boil. Pack hot corn in liquid to within 1" of top of jars. Add ½ teaspoon salt to pint jars and 1 teaspoon salt to quart jars. Remove air bubbles by running a spatula or knife between the food and jar. Adjust jar lids. Process in the pressure canner at 10 pounds of pressure at 240 degrees F. as follows - pint jars - 55 minutes; quart jars - 85 minutes. The small amount of salt used adds flavor but does not preserve the product. So, therefore, it may be omitted.

Note: I cannot stress enough how important it is to blanch corn when freezing it. Many people think that they can take short cuts and end up with a successful product. There is no way that you can have good corn on the cob or good cut-off corn stored in your freezer without blanching it. If you do not blanch it, the sugar in the corn which makes it so delicious will turn to starch, therefore, giving you an inferior product. You cannot put a product in your freezer that is not of the best quality and expect it to come out any better than when it make its entry.

Should you have a food preservation problem or question, please call or write the Appomattox County Extension Office. We are always delighted to hear from you. Our phone number is 352-8244 and our address is P. O. Box 488, Appomattox, Virginia 24522.

The services will begin each night at 8:00 p.m. Special music will be arranged for each service. The pastor will teach the children songs, as well.

Mr. Betts has been the pastor of Northview Church since 1976. This church currently is in the middle of building a new sanctuary. Prior to 1976, "Bill" was for four years the pastor at Round Hill in Loudoun County. He is a graduate of Western Maryland College and the Wesley Theological Seminary. He also holds the Master of Arts degree in History from the University of Maryland. He was ordained a Deacon in the United Methodist Church in 1972, and Elder in 1975.

The Mount Comfort Church is one of three churches on the Appomattox Circuit in the northern half of Appomattox County. It has a membership of 235, and an active program for all age groups. The church can trace its roots back as far as a visit of Bishop Francis Asbury in 1808 to a house after which the church was named. That house is currently owned by a member of the church, and has been restored to much of its early atmosphere.
